CUE

'The lightning Bolt', that's the name of a small cheetah that was adopted by Usain Bolt, the Jamaican sprinter that holds multiple gold medals on the 100 and 200 meters. The athletic gave the name today on a official ceremony in the Kenyan capital Nairobi.

BETA LENGTH 1'10"

The two fastest of the world together.
The 3-months old cub was found alone in a national park in Kenya.
He now lives in an animal orphanage in Nairobi.
Bolt promised to take care of him well and pays 3,000 Dollars yearly.

SOUNDBITE BOLT WALKING WITH PUMA CEO MEASURING CHEETAH CUB

It's the first picture I saw.

It's like this.

It's the first time Bolt is on African soil.
He is invited by Puma CEO Jochen Zeitz for the launch of his Zeitz foundation for eco-tourism and wild life conservation.

QUOTE USAIN BOLT

- Mr. Bolt. How is this?

Good good.

- First time Africa?

But Bolt said before he is a bit scared of adult cheetahs.
Since they can run faster than him.

quote usain bolt

- are you afraid of lions?

I am not worried. I think I can outrun a lion.

I am a bit worried about a cheetah though, but...

The adoption of Lightning Bolt is also launch of an animal adoption programme in Kenya.
